GARDINER.

GARDINER'S population at the last census was 5,491. The great natural advantages surrounding its location place it in the front rank of inland cities for industrial and political development. Its tremendous water power has few equals in New England. Within a mile of tide water on the Kennebec river are eight dams on the Colosseum Stream designating a fall of 130 feet, and developing over 4,000 horse power. The source of this stream is a lake fed by a chain of thirty-one ponds, draining a territory of 300 square miles, pouring over these dams and through this highway of industry a never-failing supply of water. The shipping facilities are all that could be desired. Being at the Lead of navigation for Boston and points beyond it has direct communication on the coast by both boat and rail. It is abundantly supplied with electric light, gas, city water, telephone and telegraph service. It has the liveliest Board of Trade in the State which is ready at all times to correspond with reliable parties; or information will be furnished by C. H. BEANE, Druggist.
